

Who is in your boardroom?

The issue I want to consider is:

When I think about this issue the following characters (or 'board members') come into my mind and this is what they have to say about the matter:

- Give each character a fictional (even humorous) name
- What does the character look like? What mannerisms does it have?
- How does it speak to you? Try to embody this character for a minute.
- Give it a job title! What do you think its position is in your 'boardroom'?
- How does it get on with the other characters?

Once you have identified all the relevant characters think about:

- Who is having the most influence on you at the moment?
- Which character is trying to get in your way? How might it actually be serving you? What action could you take to give it less influence over you?
- Out of all the characters, who can help you to move forward?
- Who do you want to appoint as your CEO? What actions would you take if this character was more in charge?